

The NAB has absolutely no right to force XM Satellite Radio to shut down their instant traffic and weather. If FM stations feel threatened by Satellite Radio they need to improve their own services, not attack others. I pay money to receive Satellite Radio and it is my choice to listen and my right to use their services. I use their instant traffic and weather services often and if FM Radio had a station that appealed to me I would not have purchased satellite radio. However, Clear Channel and Infinity Broadcasting does not care about the listeners, only their advertising dollars and they refuse to play the music that satellite radio listeners enjoy and they refuse to target audiences that satellite radio attracts. If they are losing their audience to XM then that's their problem. Do not punish XM Radio listeners who pay money to listen.
